NRO launches new, modern and dynamic web experience on NRO.gov

CHANTILLY, Va. – The National Reconnaissance Office is unveiling a new NRO.gov, a redesigned website that makes information easy to find and offers users a compelling picture of the organization’s mission, workforce, and legacy of innovation.

“The new NRO.gov reflects the dynamic, engaging, and forward-thinking culture of the NRO,” NRO Director Chris Scolese said. “With its clear language and modern design, I’m confident users will easily find the information they need while getting an accurate picture of our cutting-edge technology and diverse team of highly skilled professionals.”

The new website prioritizes user experience through functional improvements:

- Better access to career opportunities with more information on NRO job fields, benefits, and current openings
- Resources to help businesses easily identify acquisition and research and development opportunities
- Video and dynamic text to engage users and reflect NRO’s innovative culture

“Our new website is yet another way we are demonstrating transparency and building trust with the American people,” said Ben Fallon, director of NRO’s Office of Congressional and Public Affairs. “As people explore NRO.gov, we want to give them a clear understanding of what we do and even inspire them to work with us as future employees or business partners.”
