Discussions with Department of Defense personnel indicate that approval to proceed with System 609A as presently conceived will not be forthcoming. It is further indicated that approval might be obtained provided the scope of the system is restricted to only those parts which can be justified as a required test system to support existing and follow-on ballistic missile programs, boost-glide and related programs, System 117-L and related programs, and those technical development or state-of-the-art projects which fall clearly within areas of established Air Force responsibility. Part II. The scope of System 609A will be revised as indicated above, and the basis for selecting a contractor to undertake the revised development will be modified as necessary. Selection procedures to be utilized should be sufficient to assure that the selected
